Ethics Hub (University of Ottawa): <https://ethicshub.ca/about/>

The Ethics Hub website is an open-access resource for building respectful and equitable relationships between researchers and Indigenous and local communities. The main objective of the Ethics Hub is to bring together and share a set of resources that can contribute to the establishment of more respectful and equitable relationships between researchers and Indigenous and local communities. The Ethics Hub contains:

- A list of instruments developed in Canada and elsewhere to guide research involving Indigenous Peoples (codes of ethics, collaboration agreements, etc.);
- A presentation of the ethical issues of research involving Indigenous Peoples;
- A list of best ethical practices identified from these instruments;
- Tools for evaluating relations between researchers and Indigenous Peoples;
- Methods for the creation of tools for framing research involving Indigenous Peoples; and
- Model instruments for guiding research involving Indigenous Peoples.

The resources and tools on this website are helpful for developing your own TK protocol, data-sharing agreements, confidentiality agreements, etc.

Resources available on this site include:

- Template for developing your own TK protocol (<https://ethicshub.ca/tools/ethics-tools/>)
- Template to negotiate your own confidentiality agreements (<https://ethicshub.ca/wp-content/uploads/2020/05/47-ENGTemplate-for-the-declaration-of-confidentiality.pdf>)
- Template for data-sharing protocol (<https://ethicshub.ca/wp-content/uploads/2020/05/45-Template-for-a-Data-Sharing-Protocol.pdf>)

This Centre provides training and information on the OCAP principles (Ownership, Control, Access and Protection).

The Indigenous Guardians Toolkit: <https://www.indigenousguardianstoolkit.ca/>

This toolkit contains a helpful chapter on research, and includes resources and links to Indigenous research agreements and TK protocols across Canada.
